

Re: rezoning property from RU2 to E2

I have lived at [REDACTED] in excess of [REDACTED] years. In that [REDACTED] years I have enjoyed being surrounded by extended family whilst developing a strong sense of conservation and respect for the land. At the moment I am saving to embark on my own journey of breaking into the property market without success. Raising the needed capital to do this has proved difficult. Ever since moving here as a child my parents would always say – don't worry we will extend the house to accommodate you and your family. As the years progressed it has become more of a reality. If our property is rezoned to E2 it will prevent us from extending our current dwelling to accommodate extended family, an advantage we had at the time of purchase under a RU2 classification.

Re: Rezoning property from RU2 to E2

I have lived at [REDACTED] in excess of [REDACTED] years. In that [REDACTED] years I have enjoyed being surrounded by extended family whilst developing a strong sense of conservation and respect for the land. At the moment I am saving to embark on my own journey of breaking into the property market without success. Raising the needed capital to do this has proved difficult. Every since moving here as a child my parents would always say - 'Don't worry we will extend the house to accomodate you and your family'. As the years progressed it has become more of a reality. If our property is Rezoned to E2 it will prevent us from extending our current dwelling to accomodate extended family, an advantage we had at the time of purchase under a RU2 Classification.