Submission: I have chosen to make my submission brief as I expect it will be ignored by the pro-development focus of this "plan". Firstly, the scope of this plan is for only part of the Cumberland Plain and is for the ecosystems destruction rather than its conservation. I have major concerns with how the critical native animals that are required for an ecosystem will be able to migrate between the islands of parks. I also see the destruction of other parts of the Cumberland Plain are left out of this scope - the growth precincts of Marsden Park North, West Schofields and the developed areas west of Parramatta. As for other areas of the world the Cumberland Plain and its woodlands have a key and unique ecosystem; we should be developing in a balanced way that is sustainable and in balance with other fauna of this planet. If you are running out of land in Sydney, consider removing a few beaches and building there. Personally, it is poor planning and high risk having so much of New South Wales economic activity based in one place. Move all defence force activity to Newcastle, the law system to Wollongong, the stock exchange to Port Macquarie and their labour force would follow and relieve the population pressure and destruction on Sydney and now western Sydney. I am reach the end of my life in my 50's and looking to leave Sydney acknowledging that the rampant destruction of this city will continue while politicians use population growth to unsustainably maintain their infinite economic growth ambition. When will sustainable economics and living in balance with nature be realised? OR will it all be too late.
