My question is about the collection of the SIC funds and the linking of the funds to project funds. What mechanism is in place to ensure that the SIC fund collected actually go to the projects identified and not just into general revenue. If the funds aren't linked to the funding of projects then there is no guarantee that the government of the day will decide to fund these projects where there has been significant developer contributions. What certainty will be given to developers that their funds will actually result in projects being delivered especially when the development rely on the projects for their feasibility.
