I think the Aerotropolis is generally a good idea and an interesting proposal:

The name is however terrible and sounds like it was invented by shonk (Aerotropolis).

However, here needs to be serious investment in parks, trees, community gardens, footpaths, cycleways. All buildings (commercial/industrial and residential) should have cycle facilities.

The area suffers from really poor public transport and congestion. Building more roads will not help. The government needs to foster, walkable and rideable suburbs in the west.

Larger apartments for families to grow into should be considered (4 bedroom + study). Decent storage in the basement or garages with workshop space for bikes, tools, trades, trailers etc.

With decent design, tinted windows so you don't see everyone's clutter, winter gardens for balconies to help keep out the heat.

The option of stairs as well as lifts to help keep maintenance down.

Ensuring Strata management proposals are tendered properly.

Nice gardens
